

About Jessie Street

Jessie Street (1889-1970) was a great Australian activist for peace and human rights. The Trust was formed in 1989 to commemorate Jessie's life and to assist activities she would have supported, in the areas of women's rights, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander rights, peace and disarmament and the elimination of discrimination.

Linda Burney MP

Shadow Minister for Human Services and Member for Barton

She began her career as a teacher in western Sydney and then as an education bureaucrat before being appointed Director General of the Department of Aboriginal Affairs in 2000. Charles Sturt University awarded her, its first Aboriginal graduate, an Honorary Doctorate in Education in 2002.

Linda has a long held commitment to the prevention of domestic violence and family violence and has detailed publicly her personal experience with it.

Linda has held senior positions in the non-government sector serving on a number of Boards including the SBS, the NSW Anti-Discrimination Board, and the NSW Board of Studies.

Can you help?

We invite you, as a Jessie Street Trust supporter, to sponsor one or more school students to attend the lunch. Attending this event at an impressionable stage of life inspires them to strive for social justice and to carry Jessie's legacy forward. Your generous sponsorship of $63 per person will enable school students for whom cost is a barrier to join us at the lunch.

Linda was elected federal member for Barton in 2016, following a 14-year career in the NSW Parliament as Member for Canterbury. During her state political career she served as minister in a number of senior portfolios including as minister for Community Services and later as Deputy Leader of the Opposition.

Following her election to the Federal House of Representatives she was immediately appointed as Shadow Minister for Human Services.

As a proud member of the Wiradjuri nation, Linda was the first Aboriginal person to be elected to the NSW Parliament and the first Aboriginal woman to serve in the Australian House of Representatives. Linda's commitment to Indigenous issues spans more than 30 years.
